

DANDELION

Dandelions are found everywhere and are regarded as weeds.

They have bright yellow flowers that bloom like little suns and are an important source of food for bees and butterflies

Their jagged leaves look like lions' teeth and give them their name - Dandelion!

After the flower dies, they form a globular packed seed head known as a Dandelion Clock. The seeds are like tiny fuzzy parachutes which fly away with the wind - spreading and growing more dandelions
